Poetry.
FORGIVENESS.
Man hath two attendant angels,
Ever waiting at his side,
With him wherever he wanders,
Whichever his feet abide:
One to warn him when he wakens,
And rebuke him if he stray;
One to save him from his nature,
And to let him go his way.

Two recording spirits reading
All his life's minutest part,
Looking in his heart and listening
To the beating of his heart;
Each with pen of fire electric,
Writes the good or evil wrought—
Writes with truth, adds not, erases not,
Purpose—action—word—and thought.

One, the Teacher and Reprover,
Marking his head and deeming dead;
Quarries it with the lightning's vigor,
Beats it with the lightning's speed;
For the good that man achieves—
Good beyond an angel's doubt—
Flashes from his eye and over,
And cannot be wiped out.

One, severe and silent Watcher,
Anchored every virtue and gulf,
Writes it with a holy duty,
And with a holy truth;
If the evil doer cry not,
"God forgive me!" ere he sleeps,
Then the sad, stern spirit sleeps,
And the gentle spirit weeps.

Literature.
An you have Opportunity.
BY T. S. ANTHONY.

Mr. Frazier sat reading in his counting-room. He was in the midst of a piece of interesting news, when a lad came to the door and said, "Do you want a boy, sir?"
Without lifting his eyes from the paper, Mr.
Frazier answered, "No," to the applicant,
and in rather a rough way.

Before the lad had reached the street, conscience had compelled the merchant to listen to a rebuking sentence.
"You might have spoken kindly to the poor boy, at least," said conscience. "This is an opportunity!"

Mr. Frazier laid the paper fall from before his eyes, and turned to look at the lad. He was small—not twelve years old, to appearance—poorly attired, but clean. The merchant looked against one of the windows in the counting-room, and the boy glanced back at his shoulder. A sign from the merchant called him to return.

"What did you say, just now?"
"Do you want a boy, sir?" The lad repeated the words he had spoken, hesitatingly
a few moments before.

Mr. Frazier looked at him with a suddenly awakened interest. He had a fair, girlish face; dark brown eyes and hair; and though slender and delicate in appearance, stood erect, and with a manliness of aspect that showed him to be already conscious of duty in the world. But there did not seem to be much of that stiff in him that is needed for the battle of life.

"Take a chair," said Mr. Frazier, involuntary respect for the lad getting possession of his mind.
"The boy sat down with his large, clear eyes
fixed on the merchant's face.
"How old are you?"
"I was twelve, sir, last month," replied the boy.

"What splendid eyes," said the merchant
to himself. "And I have seen them before—Soft, dark and lustrous as a woman's!"
Away back in the past went the thoughts of Mr. Frazier, borne on the light from those beautiful eyes; and for some moments he forgot the present in the past. But when he came back into the present again, he had a softened heart towards the stranger lad.

"You should go to school for a year or two longer," he said.
"I must help my mother," replied the boy.
"Is your mother very poor?"
"Yes, sir; and she is sick."
The lad's voice shook a little, and his soft woman's eyes grew brighter in the tears that filled them.

Mr. Frazier had already forgotten the point of interest in the news after which his mind was searching, when the boy interrupted him.
"I don't want a lad myself," said Mr. Frazier.
"But it may be that I could speak a good word for you, and that would help you, you know. I think you would make an honest, useful lad. But you are not strong?"
"Oh, yes, sir, I am strong!" And the boy stood up in a brave spirit.

The merchant looked at him with a steadily increasing interest.
"What is your name?" he asked.
"Charles Leonard, sir."
"There was an instant change in the merchant's manner, and he turned his face so far away that the boy's eyes could not see the expression. For a long while he sat still and silent—so long that the boy wondered.

"Is your father living?" Mr. Frazier did not look at the boy, but still kept his face away. His voice was low and not very even.
"No, sir. He died four years ago."
"Where?" The voice was quicker and firmer.

"In London, sir."
"How long since you came to America?"
"Two years."
"Have you been in this city ever since?"
"No, sir. We came here with my uncle a year ago. But he died a month after our arrival."

"What was your uncle's name?"
"Mr. Hoyle, sir."
"There came another long silence, in which the lad was not able to see the merchant's countenance. But when he did look at him again, there was such a new and kind expression to the eyes which seemed almost to devour his face, that he felt an assurance in his heart that Mr. Frazier was a good man, and would be a friend to his mother.

"Sit there for a little while," said Mr. Frazier, and turning to his desk he wrote a note, in which without permitting the lad to see what he was doing, he enclosed two or three bank bills.

"Take this to your mother," he said, handing the note to the lad.
"You'll try and get me a place, sir, won't you?" This boy lifting to him an appealing look.

"O yes. You shall have a good place.
But stay, you have not told me where you live."
"At No. —, Melton Street."
"Very well," Mr. Frazier noted down street and number. "And now take that to your mother."

The merchant did not resume his newspaper
after the lad departed. He had lost all interest in its contents. For a long time he sat with his hand shading his face, so that no one saw its expression. If spoken to on any matter, he answered briefly, and with none of his usual interest in business. The change in him was so marked that one of his partners asked him if he was not unwell.

"I feel a little dull," he was evasively answered.
Before his usual time, Mr. Frazier left the store and went home. As he opened the door of his dwelling, the distressed cries and sobbing of a child came to him with an unexpected shock upon his ears. He went up stairs with two or three long strides, and entered the nursery from which the cries came.

"What is the matter, darling?" he said, as he caught the weeper in his arms. "What ails my little Maggie?"
"O, papa, papa!" sobbed the child, clinging to his neck, and laying her wet cheek close to his.

"Jane," said Mr. Frazier, looking at the nurse, and speaking with some sternness of manner, "Why is Maggie crying in this manner?"
The girl looked excited and pale. "She's been naughty," was her answer.

"No, papa! I ain't been naughty," said the child indignantly. "I didn't want to stay here all alone, and she pinched and slapped me so hard! O, papa! And the child's wail rang out again, as she clung to his neck, sobbing.

"Has she ever pinched and slapped you before?" asked the father.
"She does it most every day," answered the little girl.
"Why haven't you told me?"
"She said she'd throw me out of the window if I told! Oh, dear! oh, dear! I don't let her do it!"

"It's a lie," exclaimed the nurse passionately.
"Just look at my poor leg, papa!" The child said in a hushed whisper, with her lips held close to her father's ear.

Mr. Frazier sat down, and baring the child's leg to the light, saw that it was covered with blue and greenish spots, all above the knee;
there were not less than a dozen of these disfiguring marks. He examined the other leg and found it in the same condition.

Mr. Frazier loved his child with a deep tenderness. She was his all to love. Her mother between whom and himself there never had been any sympathy, died about two years before; and since that time his precious darling—the apple of his eye—had been left to the tender mercies of hired nurses, over whose conduct it was impossible for him to have any right observation. He had often feared that Maggie was neglected—often troubled himself on her account—but a suspicion of cruelty like this had never entered his imagination as possible.

Mr. Frazier was profoundly disturbed, but even in his passion he was very calm.
"Jane," he said sternly, "I wish you to leave the house immediately."
"Mr. Frazier—"
"Silence!" He showed himself so stern and angry, even in his suppressed utterance of the word, that Jane started, and then left the room instantly.

Mr. Frazier rang the bell, and to the waiter who answered it, "See that Jane leaves the house at once. I have discharged her. Send her trunk wherever she may wish it taken—Here is the money that is due. I must not see her again."

As the waiter left the room, Mr. Frazier hugged the child to his heart again, and kissed her with an eagerness of manner that was unusual with him. He was fond, but quiet in his caresses. Now the sleeping impulses of a strong heart were all awake and active.

In a small, black chamber, set a pale, sweet-faced, patient looking woman, reading a letter which had just been left her by the postman.
"Thank God!" she said, as she finished reading it, and her soft, brown eyes were lifted upward. "It looked very dark," she murmured. "But the morning has broken again."

At length, a quick step was on the stairs,
and the door was pushed hastily open.
"Charles, dear!"
The boy entered with an excited countenance. "I'm going to have a place, mother," he cried to her, the moment his feet were inside the door.

The pale woman smiled and held out her hand to her boy. He came quickly to her side.
"There is no necessity for your getting a place now, Charles. We shall go back to England."

"Oh, mother!" The boy's face was all a glow with subsides.
"Here is a letter from a gentleman in New York, who says he is directed by your uncle Wilton to pay our passage to England, if we will return. God is good, my son. Let us be thankful!"

Charles now drew from his pocket the note which Mr. Frazier had given him, and handed it to his mother.
"What is this?" she asked.
"The gentleman who promised to get me a place, told me to give it to you."
The woman broke the seal. There were three bank bills of ten dollars each, enclosed, and this brief sentence written on the sheet of paper:

"God sent your son to a true friend. Let him come to me to-morrow."
"Who gave you this?" she asked, her face growing warm with sudden excitement.
"A gentleman. But I don't know who he was. I went into a great many stores to ask if they didn't want a boy, and at last I came to the one where the gentleman who sent you this letter. He spoke roughly to me at first; and then called me back and asked me who I was, and about my mother. I told him your name, and how father died, and you were sick. Then he sat a good while and didn't say nothing; and then wrote the note, and told me he would get me a place. He was a kind looking man, if he did speak roughly at first."

"Did you tell what name was upon the note?"
"I never thought to look,"

Important from the South.

ACTION OF THE CONFEDERATE CONGRESS.

Dispatch to the N. Y. Tribune—Anti-Confederate Republican.

Montgomery, March 3, 1861.

The Congress of the Confederate States has in session here comprises the ablest and most conservative men of the Cotton States. It is seldom that men of such character and such calibre are found at the head of a revolution.

The prevailing sentiment is an earnest desire for peace with the United States, and for an amicable adjustment of all questions relating to fortifications, custom houses, money, and with entire regard to the obligations of national good faith.

At the same time there is a fixed and invincible determination to maintain the permanency of the Confederation at all hazards, at whatever cost and without stinting at any extremity to which circumstances may render it necessary to go for that purpose.

The propositions of the Washington Peace Congress will not be taken into consideration here; and no agent will be allowed to visit the Congress.

The Permanent Constitution of the Confederacy is now being elaborated, in order to be submitted to the Congress and the States. It is enabled, in advance, to state some of its important features. It will provide that the States of Kansas and of Utah Slavery shall be established by the power of Congress or of the Northern States ever to abolish it, or to say any interference with the rights it confers.

The idea which has prevailed to some extent in South Carolina, that only Slave States can be admitted to the Confederacy, is repudiated by the controlling men, and by the majority of the Congress. The Constitution will provide for the admission of Free States of course with suitable guarantees.

Full powers will be given to the Congress to levy duties on imports and exports. The tariff recently enacted will immediately be amended and will probably be made to impose an export duty of one per cent on cotton, tobacco and rice. The duties on most imports will be fixed at two per cent and these rates will be made to take effect on January 1, 1862.

Meat, bread-stuffs, tea, coffee and jewelry will be admitted free.

From Washington.

Washington, March 1.—Islands. Hay and Tobacco have resigned from the marine corps, and are going south.

General Hayley and Montgomery of the artillery have resigned and are going south. Republican members of the Ohio Senate unanimously recommended Colfax for Postmaster General.

The following abstract of the amendment to the act for the rendition of fugitives from labor passed in the House today:

Every person arrested shall be produced before the court, judge or commissioner, for the State or territory where the arrest is made, such court to proceed to hear and consider the same publicly, and if such court, judge, or commissioner is of opinion that the person arrested owes labor or service to claimant according to the laws of the State or territory and has escaped therefrom from the claimant, he shall deliver to claimant or agent a certificate of such facts, and if such fugitive avers that he is free such aversment shall be entered on the certificate, and the fugitive shall be delivered to the marshal, to be delivered to the marshal of the State from which the fugitive is ascertained to have fled, who shall produce the said fugitive before one of the judges of the Circuit Court for the last mentioned State, who shall cause a jury to be impaneled to try whether said fugitive owes labor or service, the fugitive being entitled to the aid of counsel and to process for procuring evidence at the cost of the United States, and upon such finding, the judge shall render judgment causing the fugitive to be delivered to the claimant, or returned to the place whither arrested, at the expense of the Government. If the judge is not satisfied with the verdict, he may cause another jury to try forthwith, whose verdict shall be final.

The action also imposes a fine of $1,000 on the marshal if he does not fulfil the duty assigned to him.

Section two enacts that no citizen shall be compelled to aid the marshal or owner in the capture unless such is employed for capture from the marshal, also fixing the fee to the commissioner at $10.

Nowfoundland and the Fishery Treaty.

The Leader says:—During the debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, Mr. Huxley, leader of the Newfoundland opposition, in the Legislative Assembly, quoted from this journal the announcement that it was not the intention of the British Government to submit the new Fishery Treaty entered into with France to the Legislature of that Province. Without any other or official information on the subject before it, the House of Assembly unanimously passed the following resolutions:

Resolved—That the House has learned with surprise and alarm that the proceedings of the Confederation in the course of negotiation between Great Britain and France on the subject of the Newfoundland Fisheries are not to be submitted to the assent of the colony.

Resolved—That such a procedure on the part of Her Majesty's Government would be a violation of the pledge given by Mr. Lambton in his despatch dated March 1857, in which it is declared "That the consent of the people of Newfoundland is regarded by Her Majesty's Government as the essential preliminary to any modification of their territorial rights."

Resolved—That this pledge, which has been solemnly given by the Colonial Secretary, cannot be withdrawn without a breach of faith on the part of the British Government toward the North American colonies, and would necessarily awaken a strong feeling of indignation in the breasts of those communities of North America.

Resolved—That we most fervently pray the Imperial Government not to disturb the sacred right of the Colonists in the matter in question, for apart from its injustice, we should deeply regret the stain it would inflict on the honor of the Imperial cause.

Resolved—That no address embodying the foregoing resolutions be prepared and forthwith transmitted to Her Majesty's Government and that copies be sent to the Legislature of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and I. E. Island for their information.

Resolved—That if it should seem necessary, the question should be brought before the House of Commons, in order that no means should be left untried for the vindication of our colonial rights.

The Lake Superior Miner states that a single mass of copper, weighing 18,000 lbs. (about six and a half tons) was lately taken from the National mine, being about twelve hundred pounds heavier than any previous mass obtained for shipment.

Death of the Rev. Cornelius Plummer.

Another of our esteemed fathers in the ministry has passed away. Father Plummer's heart was in his Master's work until the last. It was not the smallest of his dying consolations that his children were seeking the home above, and were likely to join him there. From the Meridian Economist we copy the following notice of his death:

"It is with deep and heart-felt regret we have to record the death of that most excellent man, whose name heads this notice. The late Mr. Plummer died at his residence, at this place, on Sunday, the 10th inst., in the 74th year of his age, and about the 44th year of his ministry in connection with the Wesleyan Church. His loss will be sincerely felt by a very large circle of friends and acquaintances. Although Mr. Plummer had reached a ripe old age, up to a short time before his last illness, which continued only about a week, he was comparatively active and devoted to the good work which had so long secured his undivided attention. He was one of the most generous, kind and sympathetic of men and devoted much of his time to visiting the sick. In the pulpit he was plain, forcible, and effective, and always listened to with attention and respect. Mr. Plummer was a native of New Jersey, and came to Canada at the early age of fifteen, in company with his uncle, a Mr. Cluine. He was familiar with the settlement in Madaket at this early date, 1799, and always cherished a vivid recollection of the hardships and privations of the pioneers of that day. His leaves seven children, five sons and two daughters, and a wife aged and feeble, whose life has also been devoted to doing good. To such of our fathers and mothers, the pioneers of our country and its civilization, we are deeply indebted; and it is to be feared that we too often want only to see them before we fully consider their work or appreciate their services. On Sunday last, in accordance with an expressed desire of the deceased, his funeral services were held in this place by the Rev. Dr. Ryerson."

An Ambassador from the Southern Confederacy.

New York, March 4.—Letters from Montgomery received in Washington say that a special envoy left the former place several days ago for the Federal capital and is supposed to be now there. He is instructed to present his credentials immediately after the inauguration, as ambassador from the Southern Confederacy and will ask its recognition by the United States. He will insist upon an immediate answer, and failing to get it, will retire. His failure to obtain a recognition, it is understood at Montgomery, will be followed by an attack on Porter Sumner and Pickens, and thus an issue of force will be precipitated on the new Administration.

Whether this programme will be carried out depends somewhat, probably, on the character of Mr. Lincoln's inaugural address.

A Dry Goods Merchant Arrested in London.

London.—On Monday last, a telegram came addressed to our chief of police, from the public magistrate, at Toronto, notifying that a fugitive named Wilson, a dry goods merchant of this city, upon a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences. About two months since, a ship named Wood & Wilson, under the style and title of the Manchester House, the goods, with which the place was stocked, being obtained from the wholesale store of Mr. Master, of Toronto, upon credit, on presentation of letters of recommendation from a well-known firm in the old country. After making enquiries, and corresponding with the supposed writer of the references in question, Mr. Master ascertained that no such documents had ever issued from the house, and the result proved that a species of forgery had been resorted to by Woods & Wilson, to obtain possession of the goods. Mr. McMaster, on learning the true state of things, caused the apprehension of Wilson, (the other partner, Woods, being at present non est) and also arrested in London himself on Monday, to secure the remainder of the stock. Wilson without the least hesitation, delivered everything up, avowing that he knew nothing whatever of the transaction, which it appears, had been managed altogether by Woods, who, after getting his unfortunate partner into a scrape left him quite unknown. How the matter will terminate, we know not; but Wilson was taken down to Toronto yesterday, in charge of one of our constables, and the Manchester House, in the meantime remains closed.

On the 24th inst., the dwelling of Mr. McGee, and the house adjoining kept by him as a boarding-house, near King-street, were both destroyed by fire. The cause was not near by, but an escape. The loss is estimated at $2,600. No insurance.

A new fashion in ladies' stockings has just come out in England. They are of brocade or cotton, but are parti-colored, as red and white, red and black, purple and gray. When harmonizing in color with the dress, the effect is said to be very pretty.

The Spectator says:—"We have heard that Mr. Jacob Treppe, of Gladford, who has paid great tribute to the culture of bees, had last summer 119 swarms, sold four hundred weight of honey, $11 worth of beeswax, and a couple for $3. He is also wintering 105 swarms. This cultivation of bees must be a profitable business."

The Queen, after anxious to extend her sympathy to any position of her subjects who may be in distress, has ordered a new set of ribbons to be manufactured at Contrary, to be called the Queen's Palace pattern, because copied from one found in the Empress's Palace at Pekin. This ribbon will certainly attract a wide circulation and become a legend for many a day.

The San Francisco Observer says:—"No oil has yet been found in Sonora! Mr. Leves is persevering in the search, however, and between digging and boring has penetrated into the bowels of old mother earth some forty feet. And we learn that he has good reason to hope he will be successful, for the city smells decidedly strong of oil!"

Singular Case of Cataplexy.—The Leader states that on Monday afternoon as constable Bailey was returning from his duty along Queen-street, he saw a man standing on the sidewalk motionless and with convulsed face. On accosting him he did not reply, when the constable laid his hand upon him and found him quite insensible. He turned him over, and remained outstretched on the ground for some time, but he did not stir. He was placed in a carriage and taken to the police station. The man was suffering under cataplexy, every sense and faculty being suspended. The name of the man was subsequently ascertained to be James Beckett, a saddler, residing on Queen-street, whither he was returned in the afternoon. The treatment adopted by his medical attendant has since somewhat revived him, but he still remains in a depressed and precarious condition.

A Child Nearly Dead.

Cherry Creek, Simcoe Co., O. W.

Messrs B. L. Jenson & Co.

Sir—My child has been very ill with worms for a long time. I tried all sorts of medicine, but it did not do any good. Your agent W. B. Main at this place recommended your Mountain Herb Worm Tea, and I gave up my child as nearly dead, but he is now well and healthy. I feel it my duty to state this to you, as a recommendation of your Mountain Herb Worm Tea, to all parents who have children suffering with this complaint in preference to any other medicine.

Respectfully Yours,
ROBERT HEPPESTALL.

Extraordinary Work of Judson's Mountain Herb Worm Tea.

Church Hill, Simcoe Co., C. W.

Messrs B. L. Jenson & Co.

Sir—I take great pleasure in giving my testimony in favor of your valuable Mountain Herb Worm Tea. I had a child six years of age who had been troubled for a long time with worms. I tried several different kinds of medicines, but they did no manner of good. Mr. Main, your agent at Cherry Creek, recommended your Worm Tea, which I am happy to say that after giving it according to directions, it greatly effected his recovery. He is now healthy and growing more robust than before. I give the remainder of the package to you as a testimonial of my great pleasure in your Worm Tea in restoring to health my child. No mother in the West would be so slow to give the public for the cure of worms.

Yours respectfully,

WAGON MAKERS!

Amusement.

The quickest way to make a tall man about is to borrow all the money he has got.

An old bachelor is a traveler on life's railroad who has entirely failed to make the proper connections.

It has been well observed that advice is not disliked because it is advice, but because a few people know how to give it.

Whatever opinion may be held of the efficacy of a "stitch in time" it is easily preferable to a stitch in the side.

The half-famished victim of a cheap boarding house, when presented with his bill, refused to settle until his coffee showed the example.

Prentiss thinks, if a young lady has a thousand acres of valuable land, the young men are to conclude that there is sufficient ground for attachment.

A young widow was asked why she was going to wed so soon after the death of her first husband. "Oh, I said," she said, "I do it to prevent fretting myself to death on account of her Tom."

"I'm glad that this coffee don't owe me anything," said Brown, a boarder, at breakfast.

"Why?" said Smith.

"Because, I don't believe it would ever settle."

"I say, Sambo, can you answer the conundrum: Suppose I give you a bottle of whiskey corked with a cork; how would you get the whiskey out without pulling the cork or breaking the bottle?" "I give you that up," said Sambo.

"Why, pull the cork in, Yeh, yeh!"

"Pap," observed a youth of tender years, to his fond parent, "does the Lord know everything?" "Yes, my son," replied the interested father. "But why do you ask such a question?" "Because our preacher, when he preaches, is so long telling him everything, I thought he wasn't posted."

In the following ambiguous passage from a modern love-letter to a young lady, we recognize a somewhat peculiar degree of compliment: "How I wish, my dear Adeline, my engagements would permit me to go to see you! It would be like visiting some old ruin, hallowed by time, and fraught with a thousand pleasing recollections."

Dean Swift was one time solicited to preach a sermon for the benefit of the poor. When the preliminary exercises were over, through his error and selected the text: "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." "Now," said the witty pastor, abruptly closing the book, "if you like the security, down with the dust!"

"PARING THE CENSUS." An unmarried lady, residing not fifty miles from Hamilton, and who happens to be on the slady side of forty, having been asked by the Census Enumerator, what her age was, she replied, "Twenty-seven." Census Enumerator: "Are you older than your brother, Isaac?" Lady: "Yes." Census Enumerator: "Well, then, he has given his age at twenty-eight." Lady: "And if he had given it at double that, he would not have been far wrong." The Enumerator vanished.—Spectator.

A JUDICIAL WAY.—Judge Norton was solemn, stern, dignified to excess. He was also all at once epistolical and sensitive to ridicule. Judge Nelson was a wit, careless of decorum, and had a sharp voice. He did not like Judge Norton. At a bar supper, Judge Norton, in an elaborate speech, referring to the early days of Wisconsin, the rude practice of that period, and the discomforts of a profession in that country, described in a tragic manner a thunderstorm which once overtook him in riding the old circuit.

"It was a night in the forest; the scene was awful, and," said the Judge, "I expected every moment the lightning would strike the tree under which I had taken shelter."

"Why, then," interrupted Nelson, in his peculiar quaver, "why in thunder, then, didn't you get under another tree?"

Clippings from "Monroe."

UNFOUNDED RUMORS.

It is not true that the Ministerialists stopped hounding their chief, because Van-koughnet asked twice for soup at the last dinner.

It is not true that the Duke of Newcastle was installed at Dublin as Grand Master of the Ribbon Association—he is not so green.

It is not true that Bill Mathews, the slave-catcher, has been dismissed from the magistracy; but he ought to be.

It is not true that Capt. Moodie has been appointed Rear-Admiral of the Blues, to command the S. Carolina navy in their approaching attack on New York. He was asked to do so, but with true British spirit, exclaimed: "E pluribus unum, never!"

It is not true that Bill Mathews the slave hunter, has been appointed Professor of the Humanities at Toronto university.

It is not true that Sir Edmund Head and Hon. Geo. Brown, are going together on a fishing excursion up Salt Creek.

It is not true that the Leader drew the lash over the eye of the Law, making it take such a biased view of the Anderson Case.

It is not true that the urgent which made Abe Lincoln's whiskers was Bogie's Hyperion Fluid. We have the best authority for saying that it was the Collingwood Slave Oil.

Brown Money.—It is reported the Attorney General West, purposed to introduce a bill of indemnity, by which Bill Mathews, his favourite J. P. will secure the $1,000 he has so unfortunately missed by the discharge of Anderson. In the event of this bill failing, the Southern Confederacy will see that Bill's virtue does not go unrewarded.

A GOOD OPENING.—The creation of a second government in the disjointed nation south of us, offers a good field for intelligent office seekers. With so many new offices to be filled, a persevering plucky politician ought to be able to squeeze himself into some comfortable berth in the state ship. We advise the disappointed Canadian politicians to emigrate. The Crown family we believe have made an offer to fill all the offices of the state of South Carolina at half the usual rates.

"They would provide for Pickens."

A North Wales paper thus begins one of its paragraphs:—"The inhabitants of Llanbedrog, and the contiguous parish of Llanfarnham, have been visited by a severe frost."

A very pleasant sound has been heard from the last twenty-three letters must have.

Intelligence from Christchurch, states that there is great distress among the working classes, who, besides suffering for want of employment, are compelled to do military duty and be withdrawn from their families. Inordinant and other causes have led to the declaration of martial law on Sullivan's Island.

FAILURE OF THE CHARTER BANK.—We learn from the Postville People's Express that this bank has gone to the wall of the international and Colonial. A few days ago the whole stock in trade was sold to the highest bidder. We anticipated its failure, and therefore advised our subscribers some months since that we would not take the notes of the Charter Bank on account of subscriptions. The result is as we anticipated—and a good riddance it is, except to the unfortunate bill-holders.

An Armstrong gun—a 100 pounder—was lately fired at Shoburgh, England, at 1,000 yards distance (a little over half a mile) against an old ship for a target. Pieces of paper, 12 inches square were set up for special marks, and were struck every shot.

The experiments were made with abounding percussion shells, each of which exploded when it struck, and made a hole in the side of the ship about the size of an ordinary house door. The old ship was partially plated with iron, for the purpose of testing the power of the shells. One plate was struck on the edge and split completely through, and the vessel was at last set on fire with shells filled with molten iron.

THE FATHER IN KANSAS.—A despatch received in New York on Thursday, announces the arrival of a messenger from Hunter county, with heart-rending tales of the suffering for want of food and clothing in the extreme southwestern part of that state. He reports the winter as being the most severe yet experienced in Southern Kansas.

Snow, has fallen to the depth of eighteen feet on the level. The cold is intense, and stock of all descriptions is dying off with fearful rapidity. Most of the inhabitants are reduced to buffalo meat alone, and not a team is able to make the journey through the snow.

The messenger walked twenty-six miles before finding a track after leaving the settlement, and seventy miles before reaching Emporia, where he took a stage.

Colonel Prince, writing from Algoma to the Windsor Herald, says: "We are now in mid-winter, and a fiercer winter I never passed. It is far superior to anything I ever experienced in Essex, or any where else, and colder, if so cold; with a bountiful and delightful snow of four feet deep, which protects and fertilizes our lands, and does us much good." The ground is seldom frozen here, and its quality, for farming purposes, is equal to any in Essex or Kent, or any part of Upper Canada, and we are so healthy that a doctor cannot live here—we have not one within two hundred miles of us!"

TWO PRINCES OF WALES.—The Historical Magazine has an article entitled "Two Princes of Wales visiting the United States at the same time," in which it shows, that had the line of Henry VIII been carried into effect, the line of Royal succession would have changed that the present Duke of Buckingham would be King of England now, and his son, the Marquis of Clanor, who visited this country last summer, would be Prince of Wales, instead of Albert Edward. It is no less strange that, but for the law of the Protestant succession, by which the Catholic members of the Stuart line were deprived of all rights on account of their religion, the King of Sardinia, Victor Emmanuel, would now be King of England.

PRESENTS FROM THE PRINCE OF WALES.—Yesterday morning a messenger from His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, passed through this city for Chicago, with some presents for the Hon. John Wentworth, Mayor of that city. The presents consist of two beautiful pointer dogs—a male and a female—and two valuable Southdown sheep, a ram and a ewe. The gifts were brought all the way from England for Mayor Wentworth, to be presented to him as an appreciation of his services rendered during the Prince's visit to our sister city.—Detroit Tribune.

Newmarket, November 15, 1890.

There is some difficulty in Galt with regard to municipal matters. The Mayor, it appears, gave one vote as councillor and another as the highest rate-payer of the town, whereby the reeve and deputy reeve were elected. Judge Miller has decided that this course is illegal, and has declared the election of Morris C. Lutz and Samuel Richardson null and void. It is now said, that Mayor has but one vote, the division will be equal, and a dead-lock will be effected.

FOR SALE or to Let, DWELLING HOUSE AND LOT, situated on Wellington Street, and has an excellent location. Apply to RICHARD BRIGLEY, Newmarket, November 29, 1890.
